

Thank you so much to all who came along yesterday to support our students at their Market Day event (right). Market Day has been a culminating activity for the students in the Discovery and Exploring learning focused through the Technology curriculum and on financial literacy. The students did a fantastic job with developing their range of products, pricing out the costs and setting a price for sale. The range of innovative and diverse products was exceptional and the students can be very proud of what they achieved. They will be spending today counting the money and evaluating their efforts. Thank you so much again to all who came along yesterday and supported the day, helped out with the development of the products and assisted on the day. It was a great success.

Big congratulations to Bradley White for being re-elected as the student representative on the Board of Trustees. This will be his third term on the Board. I was also advised this week that Bradley has been selected as the Youth MP for the Hurunui region. He will be mentored by Stuart Smith and next year will spend two days in Parliament and be placed on working committees and given the opportunity to debate in the chamber. This should be a great experience for him and a great acknowledgment.

As we head into the holidays it is timely to consider the long term impact of video games of children's development. A website has been developed to give parents some insight into the addictive qualities of certain games. Each game is rated to help inform parents, a lower star rating reflects concerns. The overall goal is to provide a "warning" label on video games, similar to the way games are currently rated for their content (12+, R16, R18) but instead of content; for the addictive tendencies. If you wish to be better informed follow the link: <http://www.mediaintegrityratings.org>.

I hope the students enjoy their break over the next two weeks and there is no doubt our Year 11 - 13 students will need to be doing plenty of study in preparation for their end of year assessments.

PIRATE TROUBLE

Once upon a time a pirate came to my house. He had a hook on his hand and a wooden leg. He was mean. He liked to eat fish and chips. He sounded grumpy. He broke the door down with his sword. I felt very scared. He tried to cut me with his sword. I grabbed a broom. I swiped, he ducked. He swiped, I ducked. I swiped, he ducked but a little too late. The pirate was unconscious. I dragged him out and locked the doors and put him in a wooden milk crate and locked it. He woke up. He couldn't break out. He shouted "Let me out of here!" He kicked a lot. He punched it, to try and break the crate. I called the Police. Then I went back to watch him.

He broke the top of the crate in an hour. He saw me. I chased him with a chainsaw. I ran into a forest and cut down a tree. The tree fell on him and knocked him out. I rolled him to a cliff and threw him off. At the bottom were some crocodiles. They ate him. I felt happy that I was safe.
